FORBES FILES PLEA TO ABATE CHARGES

Chicago, April 2.—Charging flagrant irregularities in the grand jury proceedings, counsel for Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former head of the veterans bureau, filed pleas in abatement against three grand jury indictments voted against him as a result of an inquiry into his administration of the veterans' bureau.

Six pleas were filed, charging that authorized persons appeared before a grand jury, that witnesses were examined without being sworn, and that certain government agents were active in the proceedings without proper authority.

The next step will be action by the government in answer to the pleas for abatement. It is expected argument on the pleas will be heard within two weeks.

In behalf of Thompson, who pleaded not guilty March 19 and filed a motion to quash the indictments against him on the ground that they were obtained through coercive action, a new plea was filed today similar to those filed in behalf of Forbes.

Col. Harvey Picks Coolidge To Win At November Poll

New York, April 2.—Calvin Coolidge will still be president of the United States one year from today, in the opinion of George Harvey.

After several months of examination on the political situation in Washington and elsewhere, the former ambassador to Great Britain and veteran presidential picker, has decided that the president can get tighter than his opponents can push.

Harvey summed up his political conclusions by declaring that "the nomination and election of President Coolidge are inevitable."

It was the former ambassador's first presidential prediction of the season.

Harvey described himself as "an independent independent," but promised to support Coolidge "first and last."

Harvey is on his way home to Deal, N. J., from the Jekyll Island Country club, near Savannah, Ga., accompanied by his family.

LITERATURE SOILED
BY SEX APPEAL
EDITOR DECLARES

Troy, N. Y., April 2.—Rev. George Elliott, of New York, editor of the Methodist Review, today made a bitter attack on "best sellers," in an address before the Troy Methodist conference here.

"Never in the history of American literature has it been so soiled by the stink of sex," he declared. "People are taking to books, magazines and newspapers that stress sex like flies to a pile of filth. Are you men, boys? Or are you boys who take to the gardens of literature? Don't read a book because it simply is a best seller."

20 SPANIARDS DROWN
WHEN BRIDGE FALLS

Madrid, April 2.—At least twenty persons were drowned in the collapse of a bridge over the Guadalquivir river near the village of Alcala, Seville, Sunday, according to reports of the accident received here today.

Many villagers gathered on the bridge to watch the turbulent flow of the flood waters beneath, were thrown into the river when six arches suddenly collapsed. Two boatsmen hastened to the scene but were only able to rescue four persons.

ISLE OF PINE FIGHTS
CUBAN SOVEREIGNTY

Washington, April 2.—Ratification of the long pending Isle of Pine treaty confirming Cuban sovereignty over the island would be a blot on American history, President Coolidge was told in a petition filed before him today by T. J. Keenan, Pittsburg, I. D. Potts, New York, and Edwin Yansh, St. Paul, representing the American property owners of the island.

Constitution Insurance Brings 250-Fold Return

Are you still "gambling with death"—unprotected against accidents and sudden disaster?

If so, you're doing those dependent upon you for the comforts and necessities of life a grave injustice.

The answer to your problem is—Atlantic Constitution Insurance.

In this issue appears a quarter-page advertisement telling of the case of Charles Martin, a hard-working and favorably-known colored man of 264 1/2 South street, Atlanta.

Martin was killed in an automobile accident on November 5, 1923. He had previously paid $1 in addition to his annual subscription cost of The Daily and Sunday Constitution and had secured a $1000 travel and pedestrian accident insurance policy.

$250 Payment Made.

Under the terms of this policy, his beneficiary was entitled to receive the sum of $250, and this was paid his widow through The Constitution on March 28, 1924.

In other words, on an investment of $1 Martin's widow received a return of $250, a sum which took care of burial expenses and left a tidy fund beside.

Every person of sound business judgment can do no better thing for himself and his dependents than to immediately avail himself of this unprecedented cheap protective opportunity—which is backed by The Constitution.

Life Insurance Offer.

In addition to its travel and pedestrian accident insurance, The Constitution is offering to the reading public its $500 group reader life insurance service. This is the only life insurance offer made by any Atlanta newspaper, and a $500 Constitution policy is tendered at the phenomenally low rate of 15 or 20 cents per week, depending upon the risk involved by the insuring company.

The amazing value of these two great insurance offers is plainly apparent. Don't delay in protecting yourself, for delay oftentimes proves fatal.

A phone call or a letter to the insurance department of The Constitution will bring you full details of the two great offers.

PRESIDENT TRYING TO SPEED UP SENATE

Washington, April 2.—Means of speeding up legislation in the senate were considered at a white house breakfast conference today attended by about a dozen republican senators.

President Coolidge went over with his guests the entire situation and an endeavor was made to map out a program for the remainder of the session similar to that agreed upon last week by the executive and republican leaders of the house.

Senators attending the conference included Lodge of Massachusetts, the republican leader; Curtis of Kansas, the assistant republican leader; Borah of Idaho, Moses of New Hampshire, Wadsworth of New York, Brandegee of Connecticut, Willis of Ohio and Watson of Indiana.

While the conference was in session, the president is understood to have sought its advice with respect to appointment of a new attorney general. After the conference it was learned that this appointment might be announced at any time.

The conference today was the first of its kind held by the president, although from time to time he has invited individual senators to confer with him on particular measures before the senate.

During the general discussion of the legislative situation, some senators expressed the opinion that Congress would be able to clean up its work before the opening of the republican national convention at Cleveland, but others thought this view too optimistic.

Taxes, immigration and farm relief were the principal topics touched upon. The executive was told that the measure would be reported to the senate next week and in view of the assurance given in the debate in the senate yesterday, fairly prompt action was predicted.

The president was informed that there is a concerted effort to press the immigration restriction measure in the near future. Some senators favor bringing it up immediately but Senator Hiram Johnson has requested that action be deferred until his return to Washington.

Further farm relief legislation was also discussed, for the president has decided to take the character of the legislation should take. Several bills are pending.

Ottawa, Ontario.—Canada's total gold export during February, 1924, amounted to $2,102,787, all of which went to the United States. It is a little less than the previous month.

SPREAD RAILS BLAMED
FOR WRECK ON A. C. L.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 2.—Spread rails, due to the snow and rain of yesterday, is believed by Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad officials here to have caused the derailment of the Florida Special near Woodford. The train was running at full speed when the engine left the tracks and plunged into the Mattaponi river, killing the engineer and injuring the fireman and a negro cook. The coaches remained upright and none of the passengers were hurt. Only 20 persons were aboard and their baggage were taken back to Washington.

Richmond, Va., April 2.—Engineer W. L. Snelson was killed, Fireman J. G. Gravatt was seriously injured, a dining car employee suffered a dislocated shoulder and several passengers were badly shaken when the locomotive and eight coaches of the Atlantic Coast Line "Florida Special" were derailed early today near Woodford, on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad.

According to reports of the accident to the main offices here of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad, over which the train operated between Washington and Richmond, the engine left the tracks and turned completely over. The engineer was killed almost instantly. Eight of the ten coaches turning up the train left the tracks, but remained upright. None of the passengers were injured.

The fireman was taken to a hospital at Fredericksburg, where physicians declared his condition is serious. The extent of his injuries has not been determined. Clifford Cook, the dining car employee, also was taken to the Fredericksburg hospital.

Snelson's home was at Ashland and Gravatt's at Orange. Both lived between Washington and Richmond and were completely blocked over for several hundred yards. Officials thought, however, the road would be reopened by this afternoon. Meantime, Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac, Atlantic Coast Line and Seaboard Air Line trains are being routed over the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad by way of Gordonsville and Doswell.

but greater by $1,250,000 than in February, 1923. This includes gold-bearing quartz, dust, nuggets and bullion obtained directly from mining operations.

LOAN OF $25,000,000 TO BELGIUM IS URGED

New York, April 2.—Negotiations for the establishment of credit of between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 for the government of Belgium to be used in stabilizing its exchange through an operation similar to the $100,000,000 loan recently granted the Bank of France, were reported under way tonight.

The rumors were given weight by a sharp rally of 75 points in the Belgian franc, which sold above five cents for the first time this year.

Members of J. P. Morgan & Co., who arranged the recent French credit and would be expected to assume the leadership in handling the Belgian financing, refused either to confirm or deny reports that a loan was impending. Other bankers admitted the proposal had been discussed.

SOLDIER IS NAMED
MASON'S COMPANION

Lexington, S. C., April 2.—James Smith, Fort Bragg soldier, who was arrested last week in connection with the murder of F. R. Mason, salesman, near here on March 16, was identified today as having been a companion of Mason shortly before the latter was slain. Clarence Rogers, of Ingleside, Ga., told Lexington county officers that he had hired Smith to drive Mason's car in Augusta, from where the salesman came to this vicinity.

Rogers was arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the death of Mason, but established an alibi. Smith, according to officers, denied Rogers' story, and asserted he had never seen the Ingleside man before today, when they were brought face to face in the county jail.

$103,000 RAISED
BY MACON TEAMS
IN WESLEYAN DRIVE

Macon, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—A total of $103,000 has been subscribed in the $500,000 campaign for a greater Wesleyan college, now being conducted in Macon, $25,000 of the total being reported at the luncheon for workers today. It is planned to raise the entire amount late May, after which southern Methodists will be asked for an additional $500,000 with which to provide the new million-dollar plant seven miles north of the city on Forsyth road.

The campaign was to have run one week, but it is realized it will be impossible to complete the work in that time and it will be continued until the last dollar is raised.

STYLE SHOW PLANNED ON MERCER CAMPUS

Macon, Ga., April 2.—(Special.)—A three-day style show sponsored by the Mercer Cluster, student publication of the university will be given April 9-11, it was announced here today.

Unceasing Procession of Atlantans Jam Three "Homes Beautiful" on Fourth Day

Here are two views of the charming interior of Home Beautiful No. 2—at 624 North Jackson street, corner Sixth. The upper picture shows the tasteful placing of furniture in the home's living room, while the lower picture is of the bedroom—another fine example of what nice effects can be secured by thoughtful arrangement of a room's contents.

Favored by a day's shot to the core with sunshine and a ray of hope, the week is over, probably will set a high record for such affairs in the future to shoot at.

When on the first day of the exhibit, last Sunday, some 35,000 people crossed the thresholds of the three homes—on Morningside, on North Jackson street and on Sylvan road—those in charge turned out just about all the visitors who would see the homes and that the rest of the week would resolve itself into a sort of anticlimax.

Unceasing Crowds.

But such has not been the case, for the people continue to visit in numbers in unceasing succession. The Sunday visitors, apparently, have been enthusiastically relating to their friends the wonders they saw, their friends have made the pilgrimage to beauty's shrine and in turn have told others—so that the popularity of the exhibits has steadily grown, rather than put forth signs of any decrease.

Which is just as it should be, for there is no person in Atlanta, however moderate his means, or however large and cumbersome his income tax return, who can not find something in one of these three modern dwelling houses to attract.

The men have been delighted with the pleasing air of home, sweet home, which the decorators have given the houses with their deft placings of furniture and other household equipment.

The women have been universally charmed by the ease to convenience and ease of household management which the household engineers have so carefully maintained by the delicate use here of a bit of chrome, there a skillful draping of a living room window, the arrangement of bare floors, the placing of floor lamps; the arrangement of rugs that blend with the surroundings as if "their heart was in the business."

The Double Appeal.

The double appeal that falls alike on those of masculine and feminine persuasion, is the magnified way in which value has been obtained from every cent expended in equipping and building the houses by the economical stroke of genius which inspired the business men and decorators who have evolved the three masterpieces—the most modern on Sylvan road, the big, more expensive dwelling on Jackson street and the fairly lavish home on Morningside, the most luxurious and pretentious of the trio. No lost space is in evidence; there's no crowding, no pains have been spared for the best of the homes desired; there is no sign of extravagance—in use, in useless bangles and bric-a-brac which so often clutter a house until it absolutely refuses to have a home-like atmosphere.

The homes are open to the public each day from 10 o'clock in the afternoon to 10 o'clock at night through Sunday, and on Monday from 10 in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon the homes will be open to the colored citizens of Atlanta who may wish to get an idea of the up-to-date methods of furnishing and decorating their homes. In the past, the colored citizens have been employed in fitting out the houses.

The striking point of all the homes is their completeness—furniture, electrical fixtures, bookcases, linen, kitchen paraphernalia and even the switches on the wall that flood the rooms with light have been selected and installed with a very fine care. No detail of convenience for the housewife has been forgotten and there are economical labor-saving devices in the homes which many housewives never have dreamed existed. In their place and demonstrative of their value in lessening the age-old drudgery of housework.

Furnishings of each of the three homes are entirely compatible with their cost—this fact but carrying out the idea of complete harmony which of "sound judgment, persuasive legal manner, an unlimited capacity for work"—that is the description of the new attorney general by a man who has known him and worked with him for twenty years.

About 20 years ago Harlan Fiske Stone joined the law firm of Wilmer and Canfield, known today as Satterlee and Canfield. The personal association which began then between Stone and George F. Canfield has continued ever since. They were law partners together and they taught law together at Columbia University.

Keeps Himself Fit.

Illustrating Stone's capacity for work, Canfield told how his partner found time to carry on the extensive administrative duties connected with the direction of Columbia's law school and still give his attention to a law practice and the handling of numerous cases. He described Stone as a scholarly man, but one who nevertheless possessed an aggressive, convincing manner at the bar.

The new head of the justice department keeps himself in condition by physical exercises, and long walks, Canfield said, but pays little attention to golf or other sports.

Handled Bank Cases.

Canfield was asked concerning Stone's legal clientele.

"Well, so far as I know, he did not have anything to do with oil so long as he was with us," Canfield replied with a smile.

Clients on the list of Satterlee and Canfield include a number of banks, among them the Bank of New York, the Morris Plan Bank, and the Broadway Mercantile Agency. Stone maintained his connection with this firm while he was dean of law at Columbia, but when he received a letter of absence last spring he severed this connection and joined the firm of Sullivan and Cromwell.

Mr. and Mrs. Stone reside in an apartment on Riverside Drive, and, according to Canfield, live simply.

Brookhart, Wheeler Wait.

Stone became dean of the Columbia Law school in 1910, after several years as a lecturer and professor. It is

Who--- is an Industrial Lender?

In Georgia there are twelve Business Organizations that lend money. For three years they have been banded together with the ambition and desire to uplift and dignify the loan business. This Organization is known as the Georgia Industrial Lenders Association.

A PLEDGE OF SERVICE TO THE PEOPLE OF GEORGIA

That You May Know

This is number two of a series of messages that will establish the Loan Business in the minds of the people as a necessary cog in modern business.

Each member of this Association pledges himself to use every honorable means to induce all persons or companies engaged in the lending of money on chattels, endorsement or security, as security in Georgia to observe the rate, terms and methods as fixed by State Statutes, and to protect all deserving people against the payment of interest higher than that provided for by the law.

Remember the present day loan company is a business organization, rendering an indispensable service and setting a fair return for its efforts. The Georgia Industrial Lender is nothing more or less than a banker who makes small loans as a business proposition.

Back of Poles, Wire and Cable Is Intricate Apparatus

POLES, wire and cable do not make a completed telephone system. Back of every pole, every strand of wire, every mile of cable added to the Bell Telephone System in Georgia last year there was an enormous quantity of apparatus and equipment.

New switchboard and central office equipment was installed at a cost of more than $727,000.

Additional equipment for subscribers' stations amounted to more than $700,000.

The new outside plant at local exchanges and additions to buildings represented an expenditure of more than $720,000.

Altogether there was an investment of more than $2,400,000 in additional telephone plant in Georgia last year.

The telephone workers broke all previous construction records by completing the biggest job of the kind ever undertaken in this State.

An even bigger programme is before us this year, requiring our best efforts and your continued co-operation.

The Honorable Mr. Bing

BY HORATIO LANKFORD KING

"Today, anyway," returned Mr. Bing seriously, when he thought was a great deal harder to tell the truth. "Sawyer, I'll leave you at the next corner—business?" He hoped he was not pompous saying that. He tried to sound natural. But Sawyer took another view, and was resentful.

"Isn't because you don't want to be seen driving by the club with me, is it? By—! That's rich. No harm putting you off there, is it?"

"Not if that was my destination, but it isn't," Mr. Bing assured him quite honestly. "It's another matter entirely." And he got out of the flashy car and was gone before Sawyer had time to torture him with other questions. He flew from one top-mountain to another—Lipsitz.

Sawyer watched him go with a queer and ugly expression on his face. He was blind to the pathos of the thing and now only half-dignified figure of Mr. Bing. He knew nothing of the real story that was going on in the breast of the man whose name he had crushed to the earth. "You—! What what," he said to himself in amused indignation. "But I thought it would make him a jump on them. All flop sweat or later. Then he said something like a crack of a whip to his chauffeur. I got to work fast!" He did not expect for so much, even with Lipsitz's help.

In his club next day Mr. Bing was guilty of a very strange act. It was an unaccountable act. It had been anybody to see him. They would have thought he had gone crazy. He had taken the rest of Sawyer's money, the amount above what he had turned over to Lipsitz, and dumped it in a tall brass cuspidor. He then forever disposed of the remaining evidence of his fall. He would have felt better if he had only taken from Sawyer the $500, the amount Lipsitz had demanded. But it was too late to think of that now, and he hurried from the scene. He did not know who found the money. Enough that it was no longer in his possession to contaminate him. He must feel he had ever been weak enough to take such money. And he had been false to others. If they knew, they would turn him in. And how he had hated the sight of that money, a thing that for its power to do evil could turn men's strongest resolutions and make of them moral cowards—that could leave scars, forever the otherwise smooth tablets of their loaves and clearer imagines. But would he ever be able to forget and get back again to being the better man he had been? He might have almost been a failure in life, but still that was something so long as he had been splendid. It took a real man to do that—a splendid failure.

However, he could think back to at least one comforting realization, and that was he had been strong enough to tear up the rest of Sawyer's money. He could always think of that and feel happy. He had been some sort of real man to do that!

With a patched-up better opinion of himself, Mr. Bing bubbled in his heavy heart and spread a new and passing freshness of life through his veins. For a time it brought back a second glow of youth in his eyes. He greeted club members with more than his usual display of superficial gaiety, later indulging in some frivolous pool with the happiness of a man valuing such a man's feelings. And, as he was still playing pool with one of the younger and more members of the club, when a club boy came to tell him that the great Bronson wished to have a few words with him in the library. Now the great Bronson, father of Rosa Bronson, was a man no other man could well afford to slight or ignore, not even Mr. Bing. He sent a messenger or made a polite request, the wisest thing to do was to treat it as an ultimatum from a king. For he really was a local king of finance, and it would never do to forget it if you would breathe the same air.

Looking suddenly serious, Mr. Bing laid down his cue and started to go. Anybody else might have felt great honor—might even have envied Mr. Bing this being so noticed by Mr. Bronson. But Mr. Bing saw another side to the situation, one that spelled disaster. He almost knew what was going to happen, and what perhaps would be the consequences. It smelt of fire and consequences. It smelt of fire and consequences. It smelt of fire and consequences.

"Hello," came from the new social acquaintance, smiling. "When did the great Josh take to noticing you, Mr. Bing? When the king cracks his little finger, puppets jump, eh?"

The vulgarly left Mr. Bing disconcerted. He didn't know that I felt the sting," he replied with dignity. "We herency of thought left him. He felt as important as a crushed beetle when he shell is cracked beneath a cruel heel. Perhaps it had been the word "collusion" with all its distasteful and disgraceful meaning. Just that horrible word, and "drill"—he accepting a bribe for anything from anybody! He, Bing, doing a thing like that! Bronson ought to know better. It was none of Bronson's business whom he consorted with, but if Bronson would give him a chance he could explain matters. But no, why should he explain matters to Bronson. Bronson would not have sympathized with him anyway. How could he—a man of his arrogance and independence? How could he be understood anything? If he did tell Bronson, Bronson would despise him for an impudently And—oh, that dirty, low-down Lipsitz! For what purpose did God put such a man in the world? Or worse people just born, God having nothing to do with their creation? He caught his breath, painfully and tried desperately to regain a semblance of composure. He failed utterly.

He failed more utterly when he heard Bronson go on:

"A nice way indeed to insult people who have always treated you with the greatest kindness. Nor can you accuse me of unjust presumption. I have the reputation of this club at heart. You knew that seven years ago Sawyer was dismissed, expelled publicly, from this club as an undesirable member. Now you have publicly taken up with him!"

"That's a lie!" said Mr. Bing. It was not like him to use such language, but he was impelled to employ the short and ugly word. What ever else he had done, he had certainly not taken up with Sawyer ever if contraries said he had. He would never become an associate of Sawyer's! But had he not become an associate of Sawyer's? The lie was hardly passed when he asked himself the question, and he felt that his denial, honest as it was, lacked conviction. He was he to satisfactorily clear himself of the suspicion? He didn't know. He didn't have the words to say.

Bronson ignored the lie that had been hurled at him, and smiled in his insolent, superior way. He knew he had a man by the thumbs.

"You know, by this time you know everything. What is Sawyer's new game, coming back here, Mr. Bing?"

"I don't know that he has a game."

"You can't make me believe that when you are supposed to be in his employ."

"Nevertheless, I am a dumb-bell indeed, to swallow that! You don't even know what is expected of you!"

"No," exploded Mr. Bing, and he realized that sounded thinner than anything he had said. It made a liar out of him, or he was just a fool. A man accepts a high-salaried position with another man, and yet doesn't know what is expected of him. It was true, but it was also absurd—too absurd to be true!

"Is he paying you money just to do nothing?" asked Bronson sarcastically.

"I don't know that either—not yet," said Mr. Bing, helplessly. "But perhaps Sawyer thinks he knows."

It was too much for a practical man like Bronson. Bing was a hopeless fool, or the biggest liar on earth. He snorted in his disgust.

"Your foolish replies make it look all the more crooked, Mr. Bing!"

"Perhaps they do. And when I am convinced I am in something crooked, I can resign. I am as much in the dark as you, Mr. Bronson, whether you believe it or not. It's my inability—my ignorance, perhaps. Not a flattering thing to say of one's self, but I must say it. Sawyer came to me at a critical moment when I needed money, and that's all—that's all I want to say. I do not even like Sawyer. But he helped me when I needed help. I couldn't refuse his help."

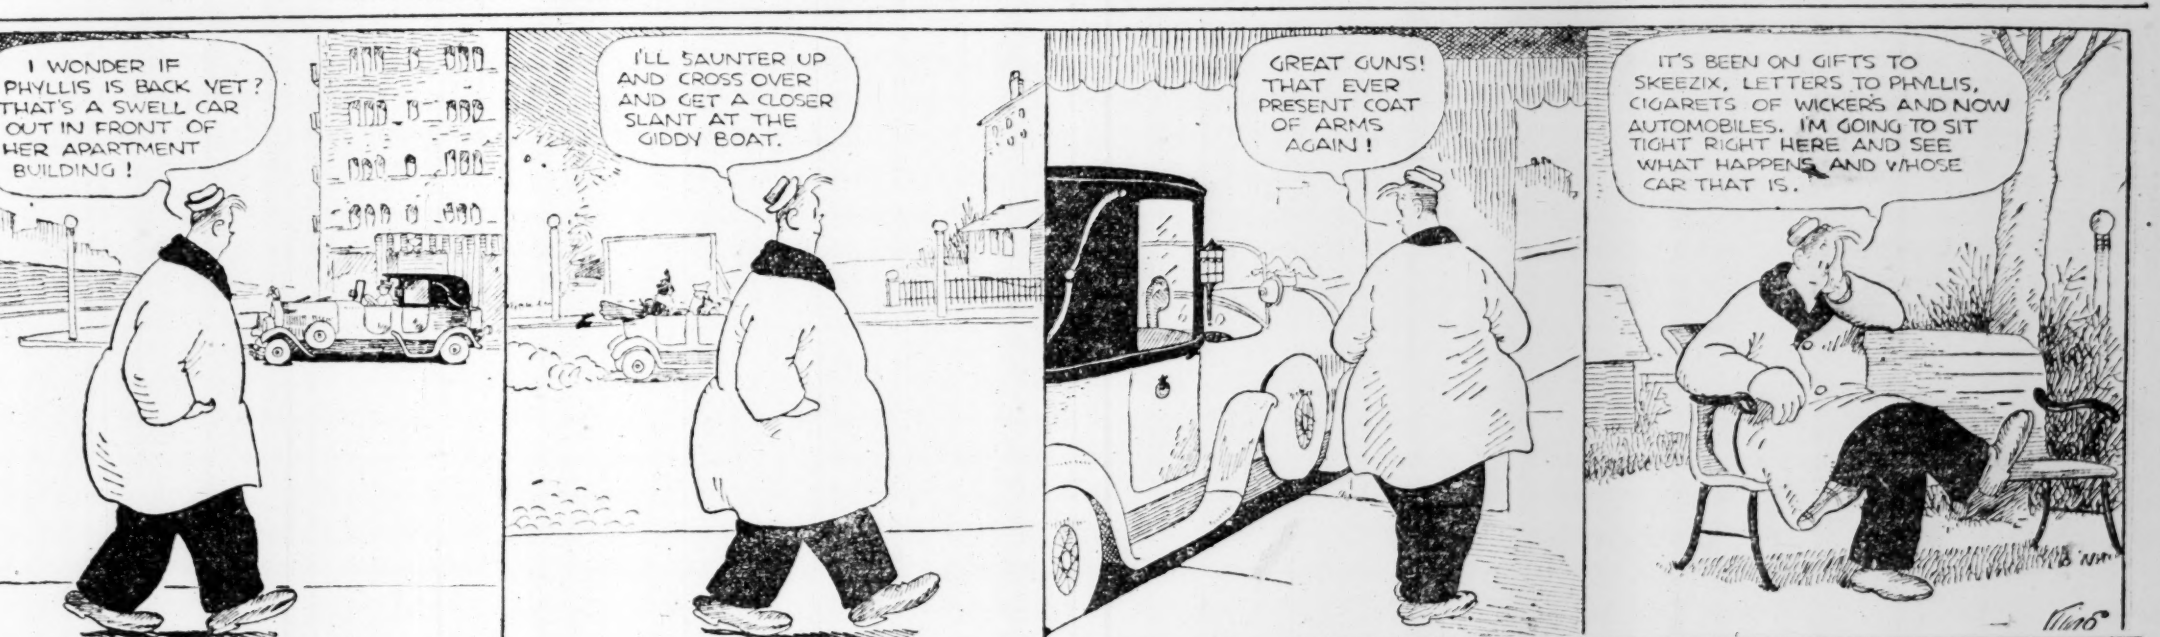

"Couldn't you get that help elsewhere?"

"I never tried. I didn't even ask
